STELTON SPRING NEWS 2017

A simple drawing on a napkin during a family dinner. That was the starting point for one of Arne Jacobsen's most iconic tableware designs: the Cylinda-line in stainless steel for Stelton. Based on his philosophy that "Good design should be available for everyone", the Cylinda-line was launched in 1967 after three intense years of developing the products along with new methods of producing in stainless steel.

Today five decades later, the award-winning cocktail and tableware series has become the essence of Stelton's design DNA. A choice that's synonymous with sophistication, it adds a timeless element to any contemporary home—anywhere around the globe.

AJ handle

One of Arne Jacobsen's very first Cylinda-line sketches was the AJ-teapot. After the sketches were completed, prototype models were made out of wood and it was up to the workshop to determine how to produce the design in stainless steel. The project took three years to complete. The handle was subsequently changed, however the rest of the design remains true to Jacobsen's original sketches.

Endless love of colours

Cylinda-line 50th Anniversary Edition

”The primary factor is proportions. Next come the materials—not mixing the wrong materials. And out of this comes, of course, the colour—and seen all together—the overall impression.”

Arne Jacobsen, 1968

Arne Jacobsen is one of the most recognised Danish architects worldwide. Uncompromising in his approach, Jacobsen went beyond architecture to design furniture, lighting and interiors, including all the details down to the door handles. It was part of his holistic approach to designing a complete project in its entirety.

Lesser known is Arne Jacobsen’s immense passion for painting and his interest in botanical beauty. In fact, he designed numerous carpets and textiles which expressed his endless love of colours. Inspired by this other passion, Cylinda-line features selected items coated in beautifully coloured enamel to celebrate its 50th Anniversary. The strong silhouettes are enhanced by an array of soft colours: ocean blue, dusty teal, powder and smoky blue.

Celebrating timeless classics

To celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Cylinda-line, we are launching this special Champagne Cooler, inspired by Arne Jacobsen's original AJ wine cooler/ice bucket designed in 1969 as part of his Bar Set. The simple cylindrical shape makes for a striking silhouette in any interior. Add to that the subtle satin-finish and you have an enduring design that will continue to stand the test of time.

Iconic since 77

Welcome new bright colours sand, dusty green and light grey on the iconic EM77 designed by Erik Magnussen in 1977. The colours are inspired by Scandinavian evenings by the sea and sandy beaches with gentle summer breezes.

Perfect match

The new Core thermo cup and bread tray are true classics, yet modern at the same time, and will look good in virtually any home. With its clean lines, the Core serie is ideal teamed with Stelton's design classic, the EM77 vacuum jugs.
